PEERS AND PARENTING: SOCIETAL FACTOR IN GLASS CEILING FOR WOMEN WORKING IN HOTELS OF MUMBAI

Anjali Ambetkar (Chatterton) Pacific University, Udaipur

Prof. (Dr.) Parul Mathur Pacific Academy of Higher Education and Research Udaipur, Rajasthan

ABSTRACT

'Glass Ceiling' the term was comprehensively used during the mid-1980s. Women, who enter as employees in five-star hotels, find themselves unable to progress beyond a certain echelon of Management. Women face various barriers that prevent them from being workers in Hotel Industry. Taking care of aging parents may be an ethical top priority for some couples to ensure it is a part of the journey we call life. Regardless of your particular circumstances, being a family caregiver is a challenging role and likely one that you haven't been trained to undertake. And like many family caregivers, one probably never anticipates this situation. Parenting skills are naturally present in parents. Parenting refers to the complexities of raising a child not only for a biological relationship but it takes a lot of patience and constant attention in the child's growth into healthy adulthood. Parenting reflects and influences the overall cultural development of a child.

.....It becomes the biggest challenge in front the working women especially when the family consists of small kids, elderly parents, and or sick family members to take care of. In this clash of Career and Family, the caregiving responsibility and a career sacrifice is expected to be a woman's loyalty, capacity, and reliability. The rate of working women continuing their services in hotels after marriage and having kids is decreasing. Hence Parenting is one of the personal, societal and situational basis barriers that contribute to the existence of the Glass Ceiling which creates a hindrance for women to advance in their career progression in spite of having managerial skills with special reference to the star hotels of Mumbai.

Keywords: Glass Ceiling, Parenting, Career, and Family, Personal, Societal Factors.

The biggest challenge in front of working women after marriage is of setting priorities. Some get married when they have just started their career. Some may get married at the peak of their career. Some are in some education phase, while some are searching for opportunities. After getting married in any of the above-mentioned phases, one has to decide the priorities, which is a tough task. Tasks are performed inside a household in order to ensure that the basic needs of its members are met, such as cooking, cleaning, and taking care of children and older adults, and other dependent family members. It is inculcated fact that she is a mother, wife, a daughter in law, however, if she is a working woman and enters her professional career, she is expected to think like a man, act like a lady and work vigorously if she has to compete with her male counterparts.

Family Planning is the decision regarding when to become parents. It needs planning and mental and physical preparation. It is extremely important to know the sufficient financial resources, whether the family state is stable, and above all, whether one is ready and wants to undertake the responsibility of nurturing a child. No matter how you look at it. Raising kids is the most satisfying job in the world. Parenting is the process of supporting the physical, emotional, social, and intellectual development of a child. It implies a holistic development of a kid from infancy to adulthood.

A newborn and parent attachment are always reflected to be the foundation of the child's relationship throughout his or her life apart from providing the elementary basic needs of food, sleep, shelter, and
